There having been considerable gossip shout the financial strength of the South Fork Fishing Club, a reporter of THE DIS-PATCH vesterday investigated the matter. Rumors had fixed the capital stock of the clab at anywhere from $100,000 to $200,000. These figures were found to be absurdly high. The writer first examined one of the certificates of stock which each of the lake owners in Pittsburg holds. It reads as fol-

The Charter Itself. There was nothing on the above to indicate the amount of capital stock. But in the office of County Recorder Graham in the Court House was found a copy of the charter of the club. The application was made to Judge Stowe. He granted it, and Pro-thenotary B. F. Kennedy drew up the papers for the court at the December term in 1879. The form of the charter is as follows: How the Charter Rends.

First-The name and title of this organifation shall be the South Fork Fishing and Runting Club of Pittsburg, incorporated under and in pursuance of the provisions of an act of General Assembly of Pennsylvania, approved April 29, 1874, entitled "An Act, etc."

Second—This association shall have for its object the protection and propagation of game and game fish, and the enforcement of all laws of this State against the unlawful killing or wounding of the same.

Third—This association shall have its place of wounding of the same.

Third—This association shall have its place of buliness in the city of Pittsburg, county of Allegheny, State of Pennsylvania.

Fourth—This association shall as such exist perpetually from the date of its incorporation.

Fifth—The capital stock of this association shall be $10,000, divided into 100 shares of the value of $100 each. The names of the subscribers are as follows:

ers are as follows:

R.F. Ruff, T. H. Sweat, Charles J. Clark,
Thomas Clark, W. F. Fundenberg, Howard
Hartiey, H. C. Yeager, J. B. White, H.C. Frick, E. A. Meyers, C. C. Hussey, D. R. Ewer, C. A.
Carpenier, W. L. Dun, W. L. McClintock, A.V.

The Liability Limited.

Not long after the charter was granted the capital stock of the club was increased from $10,000 to $35,000. There was no need to make it more. That figure amply cov-ered the cost of improvements and the pri-vate cottages along the lake were, of course, rected with private funds. Since then there has not been much activity in stocks of the club, The present officers of the club are Colonel E. J. Unger, President; Colonel J. J. Lawrence, Vice President: Louis Irwin, Treasurer; E. A. Meyers, Sectory, For several years Colonel Ruff was retary. For several years Colonel Ruff was President, and John A. Harper, cashier of the Bank of Pittsburg, was Secretary and Colonel Ruff and some others are now dead.

Of course the club is only liable finan-enally to the limit of its capital stock. Its erty at South Fork is valuable even in M present drained condition. The dam will never be rebuilt. The officers of the club are all so deeply shocked by the catas-trophe, and so carnest in their efforts to pelp the sufferers that they have not had the heart to think of their club's future.

Some of the members of the club are demonstrating their usefulness to humanity (in spite of some unfair newspaper reports) by aiding the State Board of Health to prevent the rise and spread of sickness from polluted waters. This aid is substantial in its way. One of the club stockholders told the reporter vesterday that there was actually not so much danger now from an epi-demic along the Allegheny river and in Pittsburg as there will be later on. He said the danger will come when the river

By that time the river will have fallen to a low stage, and will have a should be constant. and will have a sluggish current, Its water will fairly teem with organic matter, and it being warm weather, more of the water will be drank than now. "The Allegheny river is not the kind of a river which purifies itself every 12 miles. Streams that do that are supposed to be shallow, full of rapids and constantly tumbling over rocks. This makes it violent and swift of current, and the agitation of the water nides in the purifying process. Now while the Alle purifying process. Now, while the Allegheny is a swiftly-flowing stream, it is deep and without rapids. The Monongahela is and without rapids. TEDIOUS TRAVELING.

A Lawyer Expended 183 Hours Going to Harrisburg and Returning.

A lawyer who is too much exhausted to give his name, but one who has charge of the authorities for not granting licenses, had an experience in getting to Harriaburg which he thicks will last him a life-time. He started at 10:20 o'clock last Sunday night, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railway, on information that Harrisburg might be reached by rail, by carriage, on horseback and on foot in a couple of days. After riding a few in a couple of days. After riding a few hours this varied programme was found impossible of performance, except by a professional pedestrian. So he came back.

He then laid in a supply of guide books, timetables, etc., and took a fresh start via Buffalo on the Pittsburg and Lake Erie Railroad and any other railroads that might be found communicating either directly or be found communicating either directly or remotely with Harrisburg. He got there or Thursday, just in time to save his distance in the last hour of the afternoon session and presented the case as well as possible in the limited time allowed, and started back as soon as possible, this time by the Cumber-land Valley and other routes, and got to Cumberland. Here he found trains all run-ning wild, and was again delayed, but after vexations unparalleled he succeeded in get-ting back to his office at 11:30 A. M. yesterday, after spending 132 hours exclusive of the time of argument in going to and coming from Harrisburg. It is said that some people will hear some-thing drop in this connection on the 27th inst., when the Court will declare its decision in Philadelphia. What it will be cannot, of course, be stated at present. The lawyer who had such a tedious experience refused to give his name, but it may be stated that the initials are Morton Hunter.

Two ladies named Mrs. Tomer and Mrs. Rushenberg have lately been engaged in putting fat on Alderman Nolan's ribs. Mrs. Rushenberg has a contract to do laundry work for some theatrical companies. She alleged that Mrs. Tomer had swept dust against this clothing and had her arrested on a charge of malicious mischief. Subsequently Mrs. Tomer had occasion to do some washing, and in drying the wash she hung her line on a hook which Mrs. Rushenberg claims as her property. The latter detached the line and let, as alleged, Mrs. Tomer's wash fall into the mud. This gave Mrs. Tomer an opportunity to strike back, and the result was another suit, with prospect that before all this linen is washed in public several weeks' laundry profits will have gone glimmering.

The Brilliant Wedding and Its Terrible Seguel.

MRS. GRIFFITH'S STORY.

Joyful Wedding Party, the Eve of the Flood and the Same Party Houseless, Half Clothed and Desperate the Day After-Four Harbors of Refuge in Kernville-A Memorable Picture.

Mr. N. F. Sloan, of the Oil Exchange, has been entertaining for the past few days at his home, at 212 Center avenue, his sister. in-law, Mrs. Charles Griffith. Mrs. Griffith will be best known in Pittsburg as Miss Mollie Jennings, daughter of Richard Jennings, the oil operator, and for a number of years a student of the Pennsylvania College, at the East End. Her husband owned one of the principal drugstores in Johnstown; located at the corner of Main and Franklin streets, though pretty thoroughly flooded, it seems to have been supported by buildings around it, and was not carried away. A large proportion of the drugs were saved. These Mr. Griffith turned over to the Relief Committee for use in their hospital work, and placed himself at their service in dispensing drugs. In this work he is still engaged.

When the dam broke there was no one in Mr. Griffith's store except a small boy, John Walker by name. Mr. Griffith himself, at the first rising of the water, had left the store in charge of his clerk and gone to look after his family. Soon after the clerk, alarmed for the safety of his own relatives, as the water was still rising, left the store, instructing young Walker to Saved by the Elevator. So the boy was lett alone when the crash from the dam came down upon the city. He heard the engine whistles shricking the alarm and the roar of the flood approach-ing. Hurrying to the elevator he started the machinery and raised himself to the third story. It seemed to him an age that the elevator took in slowly making its way to the top of the building. Below him he could see with horror the rushing of the water, its ascent seeming to be as rapid as his own. A dread lest the machinery should give way almost paralyzed him. At last the elevator reached the top story, the water scarcely two feet below. Hurriedly scrambling to the roof the boy remained there all that night and the next day until

Meanwhile, the experience of the Griffith family at their home across Stony creek, was crowded with dramatic incidents. As Mrs. Griffith related it to THE DISPATCH THE SALESMEN ACT.

They Decide to Buy a House for the Family of the Late John A. Little.

A well attended meeting of the Pittsburg Traveling Salesmen was held yesterday alternoon in the Stevenson building, Sixth avenue, for the purpose of adopting measures to benefit the family of the late John A. Little, a fellow salesman who was drowned in the flood at Johnstown.

C. H. Kelly presided. C. I. McKee stated that Mr. Little had a family living in Sewickley, consisting of eight members, the youngest of whom was 3 years old and homes had been swept away. All through that dreadful night men, women and chil-dren floating down in roots and timbers found lodgement and aftery on the roofs and in the attics of these four houses.

Four Harbors of Refuge.

In Mr. Dean Cannon's house between 40 and 50 people taken from floating wreck and timber remained crowded together in one room all sight. On Sheriff Baumer's roof there were a still larger number On roof there were a still larger number. On Mr. Horner's roof and in his attic there were between 30 and 40 people. The Grif-fith house was but a stone's throw from the Horner's, on Morris street. The scenes of the night there are best described in Mrs. Griffith's own words.

sband and I,"she said, "were standing of the front porch when we heard the engine whistle. Immediately a great black mass seemed to be advancing right upon us. I shricked that the judgment day had come. Indeed I thought that that was what it was. Someway, I can't tell how, my husband had the presence of mind to shut off the natural the presence of mind to shut off the natural gas that was burning and hurry me to the attic. Our bired girl followed us, and we were there none too soon, for in a moment we heard the water crashing into the house

"Well, there we were, peering out of the little attic window—and upon such a scene. I won't attempt to describe it. The hotel across the way was hurled by the flood directly upon us, and, swinging around, lay in the water almost within reach. The water was almost up to the level of our window. Houses and roofs with their freight of clinging, shrieking, wailing human beings floated down past us, some lodging against our house. When they lodged, the poor wretches on them, half crazed, half naked, would crawl up upon our roof and down into the attic and fall, weeping and wailing and shivering with fear and cold—upon the

"A red flame flashing up from near the church revealed the whole horrible scene to us. We could see the faces of those we knew turned toward us as they floated down past. In this way we saw the Randolph family, the Hamilton family and the Balsinger family as they floated past us. By this light we could recognize the faces of those who floated up to our house and found lodgment there.

Robert Murphy at Griffith's. "The first that we could see-for many had come before the fire had lit up the scene and we could not see their faces although we could hear their voices—was Mr. Robert Murphy, the lawyer, son of Francis Murphy with his little family, chilled, soaked scantily dressed and half fainting, they had floated down the street upon the roof of their house. They made their way into our attic, and we gave them such welcome as we could. It was not much of a welcome, though, for everyone was paralyzed with fear, and little was said, and that little we hardly knew what we were saying. My own voice sounded to me strange and far own voice sounded to me strange and far away. It was like the voice of one talking in another room. You must remember that many of us expected every moment that the house we were in would be carried down with the flood. I asked Mrs. Shryock, who had come over from her part of the house to our attic, if she thought we were safe, and she replied in a whisper that we would surely be drowned. I heard some about me talking to themselves and saying that it was the judgment day and praying for meroy.

was the judgment day and praying for mercy.

"Every little while we could hear the timbers of some floating house strike ours and lodge there, and people almost naked and half crazed would join our dismal company. In this way came Mr. John F. Davis, a man 74 years old, and his wife and daughter. Soon after we recognized Mr. Simmons, the shoe dealer, and his family; then Mr. Williams, the grocer, and his wife. Prof. Marsden, the teacher, and his smilly came in the same way, and all alone and nearly dead with cold, a few scanty rags clinging about her. Miss Potter, of New Castle, teacher in the Morrell Institute.

"Many came I did not know, and many I afterward found were there whom I had not recognized. Their clothing torn from them, drenched and trembling, it is no wonder that I did not recognize them.

"Huddled together there, crying and meaning and praying and trembling, how we passed that night I do not know. It seemed as if morning would hever come. It was nearly noon before we were able, by

PITTSBURG DISPATCH. picking our way over drifted roofs and timber, to reach the land. Hurrying along we made our way as best we could up the high ground toward the cemetery. Almost the first people that I met were my neighbors, the Horners and their guests. Their daughter had been married Thursday night, the night before the flood. I was one of the guests. It was one of the brightest, gayest weddings there had ever been in Johnstown.

A Wedding Party in the Flood.

"I could not but mark the contrast. Here were the bride and groom, father and mother and guests, in tatters, disconsolate, seeking for refuge and food. Hardly 24 hours before I had been among them, at the wedding. And such a wedding. There was dancing and music without end. And such a pretty couple, the bridal pair, Miss Dalay Horner and Mr. Will Kuhn, of Pittsburg. There were over 120 guests. Hagan, of Pittsburg, spread the banquet. Rev. Dr. Fink performed the ceremony. The bride wore white silk and carried white roses; the bridemaid, Miss Susic Luther, wore pink silk and had a bouquet of pink roses. It was all beautiful. and then to see this desolate remnant of the party on the hillside near the cemetery. Wrecks and dead bodies are about them; the poor bride with no clothing except a ragged skirt and draggled white shawl, pale and trembling, crying as if her heart would break; the bridegroom half insane about the fate of his mother and sister, supposed to be lost in the wreck of the club house; other guests trembling about more like ghosts than like living people. Oh, it was a pitful contrast—a terrible ending to that wedding party.

"Out of the 120 enests I will not attempt A Wedding Party in the Flood.

was a pitiful contrast—a terrible ending to that wedding party.

"Out of the 120 guests I will not attempt to say how many are now living. Those I met on the hillside had remained at the house all night, after the ceremony, as many were invited to do, and were saved. Among them was Mr. Charles Linton, of the Union depot ticket office at Pittsburg, who was groomsman, Mr. Harry Kuhn and his sister, the two Misses Luther and Miss Grace Horner, sister of the bride. But Mr. Linton's sister, Miss Minne Linton declined ton's sister, Miss Minnie Linton, declined the invitation to stay all night and went home with a Miss Ogle. Both were drowned. Dr. Harry Phillips, of Pittsburg, who lost mother, niece, brother-in-law and sister in the flood, was also one of the guests at that wedding. If you accept what I believe to be true, that there are not nine whole families in Johnstown—that is, not nine tamilies who have not lost some of their members by this disaster—you can imagine how I feel when I think of that wedding party of 120 guests that Lattended the night before the flood at our neighbor's house."

Mrs. Griffith left the city last night to go to the house of her father, Mr. Richard Jenning, at Brady's Bend, where she will remain some time.
